

2008 financial crisis

Perhaps the most devastating political legacy of the 2008 financial crisis was the sense among a large swath of the American population that the system was rigged.

Homeowners and taxpayers took the fall and “nobody went to jail”, as financial reform activists still frequently point out.

Rana Foroohar,
Financial Times, February 13, 2022