

Bad news

One all-too-common response to such attacks [on the press for pointing out lies committed by a candidate] involves abdicating responsibility for fact-checking entirely, and replacing it with theater criticism: Never mind whether what the candidate said is true or false, how did it play? How did he or she “come across”? What were the “optics”?

Paul Krugman