

Christianity

There is a bit of Protestant folklore that sheds light on the social position of the various churches.

A Methodist, it was said, is a Baptist who wears shoes;
a Presbyterian is a Methodist who has gone to college;
and an Episcopalian is a Presbyterian who lives off his investments.

Richard Hofstadter,
Anti-intellectualism in American Life