

The Constitution of the United States

Few Americans are aware that under the Constitution,
a candidate could lose the popular vote
and the Electoral College and still become president.
In fact, it's already happened [in 1824].

...

In other words, assuming Mr. Trump is still a free man, he could be picked by the House to be the 47th president, even if Mr. Biden wins millions more popular votes and the most electoral votes.

James Wegman,
New York Times, October 14, 2023