

Gerrymandering

[O]ur main point is that “natural” one-party districts, even more than gerrymandered districts,
contribute to noncompetitiveness and party polarization.

Gerrymandering should be easy to fix, by entrusting the drawing of district boundaries to independent commissions rather than partisan state legislatures
— as several states have begun doing.
... however, the problem of “natural”
one-party districts is much knottier and harder to solve.

Benjamin Page and Martin Gilens,
*Democracy in America?