

Global warming

Climate change, sadly, isn't a classic contest between two groups of people.

It's a negotiation between people on the one hand and physics on the other.

And physics doesn't do compromise. Precisely because we've waited so long to take any significant action, physics now demands we move much faster than we want to.

Bill McKibben,
Rolling Stone, December 14-28, 2017