

Healthcare

Now, the effects of Covid and the promise of more federal spending on health are fuelling investor interest in areas such as psychiatry practices, home healthcare and even hospice care. Dangers lie ahead.

“Think about how private equity will make money in something like hospice,” says [Eileen] Appelbaum [of the Center for Economic and Policy Research]. “They’ll cut the seasoned staff trained to help families understand and cope with the process of dying, and hire people who might be able to help clean the house.”
Welcome to healthcare, American style.
