

Higher education

The ratio of effort to outcome is rising.

The more people study,
the lower the return to education.

You always need more credentials,
which most cannot afford.

Instead of capital,
losers accumulate frustration.

Thomas Frank,
Financial Times, February 8, 2018