

Income inequality

Discovery Inc.'s David Zaslav, at nearly $247 million, had the highest 2021 pay disclosed so far among the CEOs of S&P 500 companies who served the full year. Mr. Zaslav's pay was nearly 3,000 times the $82,964 that the company reported paying its median worker last year, up from a multiple of 1,511 in 2018.

...

The second-highest paid CEO so far in the S&P 500 was Amazon.com Inc.'s Andy Jassy, who was awarded compensation valued at nearly $213 million, nearly all in restricted stock. That was nearly 6,500 times the median Amazon worker, who made $32,855 in 2021.

Wall Street Journal, April 3, 2022