

Income inequality

High-income families now spend, on average, seven times as much each year on education as lower-income families, up from four times in the 1970s ... From 2007 to 2011, while the broader economy was weak, enrollment at private schools with with tuition averaging $28,340 jumped 36 percent ...

New York Times, March 22, 2013, in an article about a competitive polo team being created at the recently founded and pretentiously named Oxbridge Academy in West Palm Beach, Florida, which will train at Wall Street Farm, a nearby riding school