

Income inequality

One's income thus crucially depends on citizenship, which in turn means (in a world of rather low international migration) place of birth.

All people born in rich countries receive a location premium or a location rent; all those born in poor countries get a location penalty.

Branko Milanovic,
*The Haves and the Have Nots