Pension gains averaged 8% of total compensation for top executives at S&P 500 companies last year, up sharply from 3% the year before ...

But the gains are much larger for some executives, totaling more than $1 million each for 176 executives at 89 large companies that filed proxy statements through mid-March. For those executives, pension gains averaged 30% of total pay.

[which is often in the tens of millions]
