

Knowledge

The nature of our intelligence is such that it is stimulated far less by the will to know than by the will to understand, and, from this, it results that the only sciences which it admits to be authentic are those which succeed in establishing relationships between phenomena. The rest is, as Malabranche put it, "mere polymathy."

Marc Bloch,
The Historian's Craft