

Liars

A man arrives at the pearly gates and asks Peter about all the clocks he sees, each at a different time.

"A clock measures the number of lies you've told," said Peter.

"If you never told any, it's at midnight. If you told just a few, like Abe Lincoln, it's a few minutes past midnight."

"Where's Trump's?," asks the man.

"Oh, his," said Peter.

"We're using it as a ceiling fan."
