

Money in politics

Money can “buy time” from legislators –win their attention and get them to to step up their activity– but it seldom pushes them into switching sides.

Instead, the big effects of money giving mostly involve getting friendly officials elected and getting access to officials once they are in office.

Benjamin Page and Martin Gilens,
*Democracy in America?