

Partisanship

Political scientists who study our era of extreme polarization will tell you that the driving force behind American politics today is not actually partisanship, but negative partisanship –that is, hatred of the other team more than loyalty to one's own.

McKay Coppins,
The Atlantic, November 2018