

Polarization

Many voters dislike their own party,
but detest the other one.

For Republicans, there's something else driving their radicalisation: they are a white tribe that fears demographic extinction.

"A majority of infants born [in the US]
today, are non-white," notes [Ezra] Klein [author of Why We're Polarized].

The most common age for white Americans is 58; for Hispanics, it's 11, says economist Jed Kolko.

Many Republican regions
are depopulating.

Simon Kuper,
Financial Times, February 27, 2020