

Political inequality

In the past three House elections, Republicans' share of House seats has been 4-5 percentage points greater than their share of the two-party vote.

In 2012 they won a comfortable 54% of the chamber despite receiving fewer votes than their Democratic opponents; in 2014 they converted a 51% two-party-vote share into 55% of the seats.

Economist, July 12, 2018