

Political inequality

Today ... Republicans are predominantly the party of sparsely populated regions, while Democrats are the party of the cities. As a result, the Constitution's small-state bias, which became a rural bias in the twentieth century, has become a partisan bias in the twentieth-first century. We are experiencing our own form of "creeping counter-majoritarianism."

Steven Levitsky and Daniel Ziblatt,
Tyranny of the Minority