

Religion

The intentions in France and the United States seem similar, but they are not the same.

The United States, in guaranteeing freedom of religion, sought to shield religion from state involvement.

France, in guaranteeing freedom of religion, sought to shield the state from religious involvement. This distinction has consequences.

Rachel Donadio,
The Atlantic, December 2021