

Science

Scientists deliver outcomes favorable to companies, while university research departments court corporate support.

Universities and regulators sacrifice full autonomy by signing confidentiality agreements.

And academics sometimes double as paid consultants.

New York Times, January 2, 2017