Whenever I'm at the airport, I like to do a little shopping at the Free Store. The Free Store is any establishment that leaves its permanently price-gouged wares unsecured on shelves unattended by underpaid and overharried employees.

I stroll in, select my items, then suddenly "receive a phone call" that "my flight is almost done boarding."

I've known people who get a rush from the act of stealing. Not me. What I love is having and using things I didn't pay for.
