

Sleepers at the wheel say

If the Electoral College were abolished, presidential candidates could simply campaign in the nation's largest states and cities

– New York, LA, Chicago, Houston – and rack up enough votes to pretty much win any election.

¶

That's what the left wants – because in the large urban areas and blue states like New York and California, minorities are substantial.

Bill O'Reilly, bloviator who doesn't know
bubkes about electoral math