

Snapshot

Bruce Makowsky knew exactly what he wanted: a gigantic photograph of a statuesque blonde clad in a black gown and standing on the trunk of a Rolls-Royce Phantom Drophead, a $500,000 coupe with interiors swathed in Hermès leather. In her hands would be a chainsaw branded with Rolls Royce emblems.

Bruce Makowsky portrayed by The Wall Street Journal in an article about megamansions being built in Los Angeles, including his "Billionaire," a 38,00 square foot, 12 bedroom, $188 million spec home featuring a 40-seat movie theater, crocodile skin-lined elevator, helipad and wall of candy dispensers each several feet tall