

Socialism

Strange as it may seem,
a viable socialism must be nationalist.
Its fundamental framework must be the nation and its citizens.

For a democracy to function, its citizens must be clearly defined, their common commitment to the nation assumed.

But socialists can be oblivious to this simple idea.

At the Labour Conference in Brighton, the "remain" faction proposed that temporary residents from other EU countries
be allowed to vote in its national elections.
That would be subversive to democracy.

John B. Judis, The Socialist Awakening