

Society

Society can exist by virtue of the fact that most of the time most people's definitions of the most important situations at least coincide approximately.

Peter L. Berger, An Invitation to Sociology