

Socio-economic mobility

Immigrants are good at doing something difficult: leaving behind relatives, friends and the familiarity of home in search of prosperity.

The economists found that native-born Americans who do what immigrants do — move toward opportunity — have children who are just as upwardly mobile as the children of immigrants.

Peter Coy,
New York Times, July 17, 2022