

Sports

There's a big difference between not wanting your kids to play football and not wanting to watch football.

They're obviously still watching. In fact, more of them [Americans] are. For the wealthy—that is to say, the decision-makers—in this country, it turns the NFL into something like the military. They'd rather their kids not take part, but they'd happily support your kids' doing so.

Will Leitch,
New York, September 5-18, 2016