

Tea Partiers

Virtually every Tea Party advocate I interviewed for this book has personally benefited from a major government service or has close family who have. ... Most said, "Since it's there, why not use it?" But many were ashamed and asked me to dissociate their identity from such an act, which I've done. But shame didn't stop those who disapproved of public services from using them.

Arlie Russell Hochschild,
Strangers in Their Own Land