

Trumpism

As long as Donald Trump is breathing, the odds are that he will run again in 2024.

This has become clear not because his ambitions have changed — Trump is no longer concerned with his business except to prevent its collapse — but because Republicans are all in for Caesarism.

The party as a whole now has one truth, which is whatever Trump says, even if it is different after breakfast than before.

Edward Luce,
Financial Times, July 29, 2021