

Trumpists say

[T]he evidence developed during the special counsel's investigation is not sufficient to establish that the president committed an obstruction-of-justice offense.

William "Whitewash Willie" Barr, Trump's self-proclaimed Exonerator General and Republican-proclaimed Attorney General, superseding Congress's authority to decide the issue left unresolved by special counsel Mueller's investigation