A Washington Post-Schar School poll, conducted between June 27 and July 2, found that 57 per cent of Americans disapprove of Mr Trump's actions on trade.

However, in the 15 states ranked by the Brookings Institution as most likely to be affected by the tariffs tit-for-tat, Mr Trump currently has a 57 per cent approval rating, according to the same poll.

That is five points higher than his support in those states during the 2016 election.
