

Voter suppression

They didn't need an address when they took our children and rounded them up into boarding schools, and they didn't need an address when they conscripted us to fight in the military and make a worthy and honorable sacrifice. But now they need our address when we want to exercise our right to vote.

Iron Eyes, member of North Dakota's Standing Rock Sioux Tribe, on the Republican legislature's attempt to disenfranchise Native Americans, who typically vote for Democrats, by requiring registering to vote using an ID having a street address, which don't exist on reservations in the state
