

Voting rights

I don't think there is anything to be gained by any senator to vote against continuation of this act.

Antonin Scalia, on reauthorization of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, which he called "perpetuation of racial entitlement" and believed happened without dissenters for the first time in 2006 because senators had become too afraid to be called racist, and not because racial disenfranchisement had become unacceptable
