

War

Such is the redeeming feature of war;
it puts a nation to the test.
As exposure to the atmosphere reduces all mummies to instant dissolution, so war passes supreme judgment upon social organizations that have outlived their vitality.

Karl Marx,
"Another British Revelation"