

Wretched excess

Consistent human settlement on Floreana [in the Galápagos] only dates back to 1929, when a German doctor, Friedrich Ritter, and his companion, Dore Strauch, decided to follow his nativist philosophy by leaving their respective spouses (who conveniently moved in together), pulling out all their teeth to seal their commitment to vegetarianism, and moving there.

New York Times, June 20, 2017